User Info:

1. What data will your website allow users to search?
   a. Example: "Crime Comedy Films." (You may not use this answer)
   b. Answer : My dataset will have tourist information about castles that are interesting to people, and my website will allow users to search information related to those castles. For example : "Castle Dracula" – there are more than one castles that are marketed as the (in)famous Count Dracula's castle, all interesting to fans of horror/gothic fiction. Or, "Germany" to find castles in Germany – Germany is know to have some very picturesque castles, for people interested in architecture.

2. What is an example of a person who would want to search this and why?
   a. Example: A college student who saw The Big Lebowski and is now fascinated by the genre of crime comedies and wants to find more to watch
   b. Answer: A person who read Bram Stoker's "Dracula" or watched BBC's Dracula, would like to see the castle that inspired the novel, or the castle where the series was filmed, perhaps even visit the area. Or, a person who loves medieval architecture and would like to travel to a castle. Or, a person who blogs/makes videos about ghosts who might want to search for castles that are rumoured to be haunted.

3. What information on this page should help the user issue a new search? And why?
   The name of the castle, the location (country or region) and genres are searchable, because a tourist may want to find castles in the same country to visit. The genre, because people might want to search all castles belonging to a particular genre, like "Dracula".
